The Organisation recognises its “legal” duty under the mentioned legislation to ensure that prepared plans and procedures to deal with all hazardous substances / materials.

The Organisation recognises its “legal” duty under the mentioned legislation to ensure that prepared plans and procedures to deal with all hazardous substances / materials.

It is the organisation’s policy that all:

In accordance with the 2002 regulations, there is a control system of all substances in use. Whenever possible high-risk substances will be replaced with an alternative. Where this is not possible suitable warnings will be given and control procedures established.

There is a COSHH manual in which all substances in use are listed and the risks to health identified. As a matter of policy all employees will be made aware of the risks associated with any substances they use or to which they may become exposed.

Control procedures - where a control procedure has been established, employees will be fully trained and are expected to abide by these procedures for their own safety. Failure to comply will result in disciplinary action.

The organisation will Monitor the exposure of employees to hazardous substances on a regular basis and carry out appropriate health surveillance where necessary (as detailed in the organisation health and safety policy).

The organisation will ensure all employees are properly informed, trained and supervised in compliance with the COSHH regulations.

The organisation also has in place an emergency COSHH policy as per the amendment 2005.
